Virginia's Future in Teachers'
Hands.

Modern Germany, with her amazing progress, her rapid growth and greatness, is the product of her teachers. From a nation poor and despised, Germany, by eminent teachers and education, has

The Great Awakening.

My friends, I hall with delight the great educational awakening in Virginia More new legislation, more increased appropriations have osen given, more, fine schools effected, and more practical benefits between upon education during the last year than in the provious decade, Nearly half of the cities and countles of this State have increased their school taxes. The present annual increased local school taxes for primary and high schools will more than aggregate five hundred thousand dollars. I carnestly urse the authorities of the remaining countles to act and join this glorious procession of countless in their march t, superior educational advantages. About 225 new, handsome and commodious school buildings have been erected within the last year. In many of the countles and cities the salaries of the teachers have been increased, and in many the school term lengthened. I wish to say to the teachers of Virginia, prepare yourself and become trained, competent teachers; perform your duties well and failt folly, and you may reat assured that you will in the future. Unpatriotic and paratmonious grumblers, who love darkness, may complain, but they cannot stay the dawn of the rising sun of educational light. One of the most conspicuous figures in achieving this great work has been our splendid Superintendent of Schools. J. D. Eggieston. Young, enthuslastic, energetic, courageous, with definite plans and purposes, he is worthy to be followed, and if properly sustained, I believe he will preduce a wonderful improvement in our public school system.

My friends, in conclustin, let us recognize, that the work before us is great, and will require for its performance continuous years of patience and persistency. But, with will ing hands and brave hearts, let us undertake our task. If we continue firm and faithful in our work, the years of rich fruitage will certainly come, and Virginia will have happy homes, blessed with all the refining influence of ed sery in Serons missers, to frighten us or deter us from the pathway of educational progress. Let us firmly and fearlessly continue our advance until we have a coulred an educational system which will upilit our people to the pinnacle of internal splender and material prosperity our publics make the courses taught in the number of the people to the daily public better the compations of the purpose, of education in mind that purpose, of education in mind that purpose, of education in mind that the purpose, of education in the purpose of the pu
